

Johnson Creek RV Park

Ingram, Texas April 2014

The year just keeps rolling along; April was here way to fast. We returned to this pleasant park and knew why we enjoy the Hill Country so much. The park was full, but by the time we all arrived they seemed (as if by magic) to have enough spaces for us. This will be an increasing problem as we continue to camp, "frackers" and winter Texans seem to be taking up all the spaces.

About half the group got there by Wednesday and the rest came on Thursday. We love this area as there is so much to do and places to eat. We are getting so big that all of us cannot eat out at the same place at one time. Wednesday night was a good example-----some stayed in and a few went out. The weather was pleasantly warm and sitting outside was a nice change from all the really cold weather we have been camping in lately.

Thursday was windy and cool, but our intrepid shoppers were not to be deterred. We managed to get some great bargains and go out to lunch. We had to break into groups as there were so many of us. We are learning more and more about Kerrville and enjoying what it has to offer.

Some of the guys went "shooting" at a nearby range and had a great time. Some of us had family to visit and art gallery's to see. No matter what your interest, Kerrville has something for you. Most of us grilled Thursday night, while the rest went out.

Friday the games started in earnest and everyone enjoyed being inside as the weather had turned cold. This is a great time to test your RV's air-conditioning and heating as both were needed this campout. Friday night we split up for dinner, some went out and some stayed in and grilled. Games were played later and fun was had by all.

Saturday was nice and chilly so staying in and playing was a good choice. A few of us went shopping again and had a great lunch. Upon returning we had time for a few games and then we had to prepare for the pot-luck. The dinner was wonderful and once again I must mention that we have the best cooks in the world (well maybe Texas)!

Sunday breakfast was served by our hosts; the Burns and the Hagers. It was yummy, a great egg and sausage casserole, fresh baked biscuits with jelly and juice. They can serve us anytime and we will love it.

Birthdays for April were: Paul Primeaux, Charles Hodges, Karen Hagar and Jerry Sellers. Anniversaries were: Frank and Barbara Shadrock and Joe and Janelle Wolf. It was reported that Jack Roden was doing better with his recent foot surgery. A note to all-----please let me know if you have some concerns or want something added in the "News letter" if the reporter doesn't know about it then it won't get in.

Until next time at Peach Country, have a safe and Happy Easter. Your riving reporter,

Kathy Gabriel
